EXTORTION
(OO: LA)

[REDACTED] KIRK KERKORIAN, Chairman of the Board, MGM, 10202 Washington Boulevard, Culver City, California, advised on 6/24/75 that attached handwritten, undated and unsigned letter had been received at MGM on 6/23/75. [REDACTED] noted that the envelop contained no postage and no return address and was postmarked 6/4/75, U.S. Postal Service. The envelop was addressed to "Mr. K. KRIKORIAN is greek, MGM, Los Vegas, Nevada, U.S.A."

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] said the letter apparently was opened in the dead letter office, San Francisco, was then delivered to the MGM Hotel, Las Vegas, and was forwarded by the MGM Hotel to Mr. KERKORIAN's office at MGM, Culver City. According to [REDACTED] the letter has been handled by several people.

b6

[REDACTED] noted that the letter is rambling and is partially incoherent. It contains not direct or specific threat.

The letter apparently is critical of insurance companies and the clergy and makes reference to rapists. The writer apparently referring to KERKORIAN states "...we got you in too as greek to pretend to be Armenian we work together We are the United Force of Little Guys. . ." The letter also mentions ". . .Brand-all Armenian [REDACTED] - on the Forehead . . . This I write to you KRIKORYN you a Greek told to keep eye on all Armenians - Brand we thee Greek. So every where you go - our innocent will know thee."

b6
b7C

[REDACTED] said that Mr. KERKORIAN was concerned about the letter because the KERKORIAN's have a [REDACTED] named [REDACTED] and the suggestion in the letter is that [REDACTED] and all Armenians are to be branded on the forehead. [REDACTED] said that Mr. KERKORIAN is aware that the contents of the letter probably do not constitute a sufficient threat to come within the purview

Of greatest potential value as code signals have been occasional spurious threads, inexpertly sewn into the garment, which have been observed on several occasions.

A purple spot or tack stitch with tails up to two inches appeared in a single shirt of shipments by [redacted]

A large red figure appeared in shirts belonging to [redacted] and D. BEGALMAN (New York City ). A green figure appeared in a shipment by [redacted]

b6

Attempts to attach meaningful significance to these threads in the mannernoted above for "x" and "-" marks were likewise unsuccessful. These marks have appeared only on incoming shipments. Two shipments now in [redacted] for laundering contain such marks - those of D. BEGALMAN and [redacted] In several instances, the threads have penetrated the outside of the garment and would be readily visible when the shirt was worn. In all instances, the threads failed to exhibit signs of wear and presence of skin flakes and body oil visible in most of the "x" and "-" marks.

From the information available, the existence of a code cannot be affirmed or refuted. The arbitrary nature of the phenomena observed, the wide expanse of possible code meanings, and the lack of corroborating information to validate possible subject matter, preclude definitive values from being developed at this time.

It is to be noted that in the early part of January, 1964, SA [redacted], New York Office, while at the FBI Laboratory delivering a package that was received from the United States Post Office Department, received training in the champering of packages and the examination that was required by the FBI Laboratory.

MGM-UA considers major restructuring

By The Associated Press

MGM-UA Entertainment Co., a film company 50.1 percent owned by financier Kirk Kerkorian, says it's considering a restructuring that could include sale of one or both of its movie studios.

The disclosure came after heavy losses and months of uncertainty about how the studios will operate.

Spokesman Arthur Rockwell confirmed Tuesday that restructuring proposals are being studied, but he indicated no decision appears near at hand.

The company made the disclosure in proxy material on a proposal to purchase the 15 percent it doesn't already own of MGM-UA Home Entertainment Group Inc., a home video and pay-TV unit. Shareholders are to vote on that plan June 14.

The document said MGM-UA earlier this year began considering a variety of restructuring proposals, including possible sale of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Film Co. or United Artists Film Co. or both.

"Although no assurance can be given that any such transaction will take place, the merger (of MGM-UA and the home-video unit) could facilitate any such transaction," the document said.

"It is a giant hedge clause put in the proxy to cover any and all options," Rockwell said. "It doesn't mean anything will happen."

Kerkorian was believed to be looking for ways to increase the value of the company's stock, trading for about $15 per share.

Rockwell said proposals to take the company private or repurchase stock aren't among those being considered.

In January 1984, Kerkorian bid $400 million, or $16 per share, to buy the remaining 49.9 percent of MGM-UA but rescinded the offer after analysts said the price was too low.

For the six months ended Feb. 28, MGM-UA lost $80.3 million on revenue of $333 million because of a continuing string of box-office failures.

In January, the company announced it was splitting the operation of its MGM and United Artists film units in a bid to increase output and competitiveness between the studios.

Alan Ladd Jr. was brought in run United Artists, and Chairman Frank Yablans, who was left in control of only the MGM half of the company, resigned shortly thereafter.

The two operations were then reconsolidated under Ladd.

The studios were separate until 1980 when MGM bought United Artists from Transamerica Corp. for $380 million. At the time, the company sold 15 percent of its home-video unit to the public to raise funds for movie and TV production.

Kerkorian's initial plan supposedly was to run MGM and UA as separate entities, but their operations were quickly combined, first by Chairman David Begelman, then by Yablans.

Had we been operating under these restrictions at that time, and under H.R. 1984—this bill proposed by Mr. Goldwater—only been arrested—he had never been convicted, and probably in a man threatening to produce nerve gas, and very nearly on the verge of doing exactly that, producing nerve gas. We would have been very effectively prevented from locating that man had we been operating under those restrictions.

JFK in Dallas, King in Memphis: Conspiracy was the conclusion, but the committee's web of evidence and conjecture was gossamer thin

FRANCIS FORD COPPOLA PRESENTS: "THE LITTLE LAMB" AND "THE LION/LAMB"

TALES OF CONSPIRACY

BY HONORABLE ANIELLO DELLACROCE

With little fanfare and less suspense, the House assassinations committee assembled in an ornate Capitol caucus chamber one morning last week to disgorge its 686-page report on the murders of John F. Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. As previewed months ago, the haunting conclusions of the panel's nearly two-year, $5.4 million investigation were that "lone gunmen" Lee Harvey Oswald and James Earl Ray probably did not act alone—and that Oswald may have been the dupe of organized crime. The findings were pronounced a "can of worms" by a flummoxed FBI official, but conspiracy junkies traded I-told-you-so's. In New York, Bantam Books published 75,000 copies of the committee's report, hopefully titled "The Final Assassinations Report"—but given the committee's disturbingly open-ended investigation, the title seemed wildly optimistic.

SECOND GUNMAN? The full report rambled through 28 volumes of evidence, and only dedicated buffs could follow it all. The Warren Commission's verdict that Oswald killed Kennedy was copiously upheld, as was its theory that a single bullet wounded both the President and former Texas Gov. John Connally. The CIA, the Secret Service and the FBI were absolved of cover-up or involvement in the Kennedy assassination, although the committee harshly criticized the FBI's long COINTELPRO campaign to discredit Dr. King. Elaborately hedged and laden with might-have-beens, the committee's assertion of conspiracy seemed largely a matter of conjecture—except for the ominous claim, by a group of acoustics experts, that a second gunman had apparently fired on the Kennedy motorcade and missed. First advanced last summer and substantially buttressed in December, the acoustics report prompted the committee to make a 180-degree turn in its initial conclusions that Oswald acted alone. The authors maintained that a long-lost recording of Dallas police-radio transmissions contains the echoes of four shots in Dealey Plaza—three by Oswald, firing from the Texas School Book Depository, and a fourth by someone firing from the famous "grassy knoll" along Kennedy's motorcade route. Their analysis was not universally accepted: New York Times columnist Tom Wicker, in a foreword to the paperback edition of the

to Kennedy's death, the report says, that constitutes a conspiracy. Confounded by such subtleties, some committee members rebelled. If the report were offered as prosecution evidence, snapped Michigan Republican Harold Sawyer, "I'd file it in the circular file."

'TENUOUS' LINKS: Half hidden in the report's factual chiaroscuro was the theory favored by staff director G. Robert Blakey that Oswald was manipulated by mobsters bent on halting the Kennedy Administration's war on organized crime. Investigators traced Oswald's travels in Louisiana during the summer of 1963 and discovered "tenuous" links to the underworld. One was through the late David Ferrie, a cashiered airline pilot and sometime private eye who was a suspect in former New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's much-maligned assassination probe: Ferrie worked for a lawyer who represented underworld boss Carlos Marcello in a bitter deportation dispute with Kennedy Administration and knew Marcello personally. The committee found six "credible" witnesses who saw Ferrie and Oswald together.

But Ferrie denied knowing Oswald. So did Marcello, who testified before the assassinations committee in executive session. And the committee conceded that the unstable and passionately ideological Oswald would have made an unlikely candidate for mob hit man. But a plot were mired in speculation. Even its definition of "conspiracy" was a stringent legalism: "If two or more individuals agreed to take action to kill President Kennedy and at least one of them took action" leading Senator THURMOND. Could I interrupt? You say you cannot get this information. Would you mind just stating what law prohibits you from getting such information?

Mr. McCREE. Well, the Freedom of Information Act, the Right to Privacy Act, as I understand it, does prohibit us from gaining this information. Additionally it so confuses the public that they are reluctant to provide us with this information.

Mr. SOURVINE. You mean the Privacy Act?

Mr. McCREE. Yes, sir.

Senator THURMOND. It is a Federal statute that is handicapping you?

Mr. McCREE. Yes, sir, it is in our relation with Federal Agencies.

Senator THURMOND. And not the State statutes or local ordinances?

Mr. McCREE. Yes, sir, that's correct. Very recently, a State senate bill, No. 852, came up before Governor Brown which would, in effect, duplicate the Federal legislation. He had the foresight to veto it, even though it passed both houses.

For example, Senator Thurmond, if I go to an outfit like Pacific Gas & Electric or the telephone company, and ask who holds this particular telephone number, I may arrest a terrorist who may have the telephone number in his possession. If I try to check it back, many times the companies refuse to provide that information, because they don't want to be a party to lawsuits, or be accused of invasions of privacy, and these sorts of things.

For example, one thing occurred very recently. The New York Police Department was attempting to locate a suspect that was wanted for murder. As I understood it, it had been a particularly brutal murder. The NYPD tried to locate him for some period of time, and could not locate him. It ended up that the gentleman was drawing welfare checks, and was living right out in the open, and yet, due to the size of the city and the fact the police department cannot get welfare information on who gets a check or anything along this line, the suspect successfully evaded arrest for a considerable period of time.

We had a situation in Los Angeles, a man called the Alphabet Bomber. Had we been operating under these restrictions at that time, and under H.R. 1984—this bill proposed by Mr. Goldwater—we never would have been able to locate that man, because he had only been arrested—he had never been convicted, and probably in all likelihood his name would have been purged from the files. Here was a man threatening to produce nerve gas, and very nearly on the verge of doing exactly that, producing nerve gas. We would have been very, very effectively prevented from locating that man had we been operating under those restrictions.

Mr. Levi, the U.S. Attorney General, recently suggested a 90-day period for the Federal Bureau of Investigation to retain files about a crime or suspected crime. Having dealt with the terrorists for a number of years, I know that this would create serious problems. Terrorists will start planning an action, temporarily suspend that action for some reason or another, and they may not decide for some period of time not to do it. That would, of course, put it in that category of a 90-day problem, and the preliminary information might be purged. That information may be lost forever, and this may effectively prevent the arrest of a person contemplating or conspiring to commit a very, very violent act against society.

Though his rise was rapid—bishop in 1964, archbishop of Krakow in 1966, cardinal in 1967—Wojtyla tended to be overshadowed by Poland's Cardinal Stefan Wyszyński, who had gone to prison for his faith during the 1950s. Wojtyla deferred to Wyszyński almost like a son, but his own approach to the Communist regime was more pragmatic and probably more effective. His style was to teach and train a generation of Polish priests to battle quietly for the faith without bringing on the Russian tanks.

During the next decade, now wearing the cardinal's red hat and with his stock soaring in Rome, he extended his travels. He made his first full-scale visit to the U.S. in 1976. Here ostensibly to attend the Eucharistic Congress in Philadelphia, he turned the occasion into a 37-day tour around the country, during which he must have met half the 12 million Polish-Americans. He stood happily in line for his fried chicken at a barbecue in Wisconsin and so dazzled Harvard divinity students with a lecture that next day's Harvard Crimson scooped the world by labeling him a potential pope. Wojtyla never gave any sign of leaving the job but, having once done it, the new pope quickly cleared just who was boss. In addition, he spoke to the faithful from the balcony on that evening, and thereafter, August 5. Burlingame, Calif.—The New World Liberation Front unsuccessfully attempts to bomb an insurance agency.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—A female is arrested after attempting to smuggle hacksaw blades to BLA prisoners.

August 6. Los Angeles, Calif.—L.A. Airport is bombed by alphabet bomber. August 16, in a tape recording sent to a newspaper, a man calling himself Isaac Rasim said he was the military officer for the Aliens of America, claimed bombing, and told police where to find another in the bus terminal; he said the group wanted immigration laws repealed or he would "write our name in blood"; he also claimed a blast on August 17, but police doubt his claim. Muharem Kurbegović (his real name) was arrested August 20 as he tried to place a tape recording in a restaurant; the case is cited by California Attorney General Evelle Younger as an imitation of terroristic activities.

August 7. New York City—A dynamite bomb planted at the U.N. General Assembly Building, is dismantled by police.

Communities have not been affected by threats involving new technologies, because in each instance the threat was either determined not to be credible or local decisionmakers made the conscious decision to treat the threat in generally the same manner as they treated conventional bomb threats in dealing with the community. The obvious drawback to this approach is that in the first actual instance many people might die. However, when weighed against the effects and costs of massive community action in response to every threat that seems credible, one can find merit in this style of response.

Once it is necessary to involve the entire community in countering threats of new-technology terrorism, the general fear level of the community will have been raised. Regardless of the outcome of that immediate threat, changes in society will have been wrought. Given the likely media coverage of a high-technology event, the effect of reacting on a community-wide basis would be experienced as a precedent by all local leaders involved with future threats, whether in the affected community or not. Equally as significant is the probability of an epidemic effect once it has been demonstrated that a threat resulted in a widespread reaction. As evidenced by event data on hijackings, bombings, and even kidnappings, often a rash of similar incidents or threats follows a widely publicized terrorist act.

Until a threat is actually carried out or a threat is permitted to impact on the community as a whole, it seems unlikely that any change in public fear will result. Although the nuclear safeguards debate has highlighted a full range of catastrophic dangers, there has been relatively little reaction from the public, including those communities in the vicinity of the 55 operational nuclear power plants. There is no evidence of a general exodus from plant areas nor even any sign of shrinking property values. Once an incident occurs, changes in public fear will be primarily a function of the damage, casualties, and societal psychological impact. With respect to these functions, the principal fear in determining the subjective consequences of an act appears to be the distance from the target and the extent of media coverage. At this point it is impossible to judge societal reaction, because, to date, the world has not experienced a deliberate act that killed thousands of people, outside of war. But some insight might be gained from recent disasters and terrorist acts.

A Palestinian terrorist killed himself and 87 other persons aboard a U.S. commercial airliner in 1974 when he detonated a bomb while inflight off the coast of Greece. The incident was initially reported as an accident; the subsequent findings of a deliberately set bomb did not have any significant impact on aviation in general or on passenger volume in particular. In April 1974, a self-styled Atom Guerilla sprayed railway compartment cars with radioactive I-131 in Austin, Tex., on two occasions. A total of six persons became ill with upset stomachs, but no hospitalization was required. Again, no recognizable impact occurred, even of a local character.

Two incidents in the United States resulted in significant consequences. The ALIEN bomber killed three persons at the Los Angeles Airport in late 1974 with an explosive device placed in a locker. This had the immediate but transient effect of reducing the use of that airport and led to increased security measures for all passengers. The bomber later threatened other incidents, causing public fear and an increase in local security measures. The LaGuardia Airport bomb explosion in December 1975 killed 12 persons and was the catalyst for Presidential action. The media coverage brought the incident to virtually millions of homes. As a result of this event new countermeasures have been instituted at airports, affecting every air traveler.

The incidents cited above point, as does the full weight of evidence derived from disaster and terrorism research in general, to several conclusions concerning subjective reaction. First, the local consequences of acts are far greater than the nonlocal consequences. Particularly with respect to the overall level of concern and fear, locales impacted upon directly by events have reacted by taking preventive measures. Nonlocal populations have reacted with sympathy and even bitterness, but implementation of new measures has been limited. Second, it is unlikely that public fear will increase until after an event occurs. Threats have not resulted in significant societal changes. Finally, assuming that an extrap-

NO. 2 IN BUS LOCKER

Third 'alphabet bomb' planted for tomorrow, L.A. is warned

LOS ANGELES (U) — Police have safely removed a 25-pound explosive device from a bus terminal locker, but are still trying desperately to find a man who says he has already planted another "alphabet bomb."

The mysterious, foreign-accented man, self-proclaimed military chief of Aliens of America, continued his alphabet assault on Los Angeles last night by planting an explosive device in a locker at a downtown Greyhound bus depot.

EARLIER, the same voice said the organization had planted a bomb which devastated a terminal at Los Angeles International Airport on Aug. 6, killing three persons and injuring 35 others.

The man, who calls himself Isaac Rasim in tape-recorded communiques, has vowed to spell out "Aliens of America" across the face of the nation "in blood." He has said "A" was for airport and "L" was for locker.

In a tape recording directed to the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner last night, he said bomb "I" already had been planted.

"Nothing could make us happier than if we could conclude that we can reveal the location of bomb 'I' which is already planted," the speaker said in a casual, confident manner.

BOMB "I" could be a device which Rasim said would be exploded in a crowded area tomorrow if two now-retired police officers are not charged in connection with the death of two Mexican nationals in 1970.

Asked if he thinks the threat still stands for tomorrow, Asst. Police Chief Daryl Gates said, "I assume so."

Rasim said the "O" in "of" in "Aliens of America" stood for oil refineries. But he excluded as a target those owned by Standard Oil Co.

"Standard Oil Co. has courageously taken a stand of reasoning for the American people on the matter of Israel. For that reason, we have excluded each and every oil refinery of Standard Oil Co. from applicability to the letter 'O' in our name which under all circumstances shall stand for oil refinery," Rasim said in the latest tape.

AUG 18 1974 BOMBER

list: Frederick Elkerenkoetter. An audience of 18,000 is expected.

In several taped communiques, a man identifying himself as Isaac Rasim, self-proclaimed military head of an organization he calls "Aliens of America," has vowed to write the name of the group across the country "in blood" unless U.S. immigration laws are changed.

In the Friday incident, police say Rasim warned the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner late Friday that a bomb had been placed in a locker at the downtown Greyhound bus terminal. Police evacuated about 100 people from the terminal and safely removed a bomb from a locker.

from him, but that it is not yet enough.

He has been labeled the "alphabet bomber" because he has vowed to "spell out in blood across America" the lettered sequence of the group he claims to represent, Aliens of America.

Rasim has been described as having a thick Middle Eastern accent, but police said linguistics experts believe it is Russian or Slavic, perhaps Hungarian or Lithuanian.

MEMORIAL TO THE 1970-1980 MOVEMENT

I've never been able to muster much sympathy for the "Don't Buy Books by Crooks" lobby. Take their argument to its logical extreme and you'll find yourself chastely averting your eyes from the works of Villon, Defoe and O. Henry. Crooks are uniquely qualified to tell us about crookedness, which has always been fiction's principal theme. Now that the Iron Man of Watergate has finally broken his silence, we may surely be forgiven our attentiveness. Gordon Liddy has written a novel. It will do you no good to insist that Nixon, Haldeman and their friends wrote fiction too, for this really is a novel, a thriller as gaudy as any Ian Fleming ever committed to print. Two questions immediately present themselves: Does it shed any light on Watergate? Is it a passable thriller? The answers are no and yes.

Nevertheless, in what I take to be a meretricious ploy, Liddy implies in his opening scene that he will tell us what we want to know. A former FBI agent, as dedicated to personal discipline as his author ever was, burgles the headquarters of a multinational conglomerate—all in the service of his country, of course, and hence no crime at all. But after some authoritative lore on lock-picking and safecracking, Liddy kills him off, and the rest is fantasy. About this rest, I'll try to be brief. The head of the conglomerate, Gregory Ballinger, is a KGB general whose mission is to acquire key elements of American industry for Soviet control. To confirm this skulduggery, the CIA engages a former intelligence agent turned playboy and financial wizard, Richard Rand. Rand attempts to put the screws on Ballinger by pitting his millions against the Russian's billions. The contest is not as unequal as it seems because Rand, through his dead wife, is connected to the Mafia; through his Chinese mistress, he is connected to "the consolidated Tongs."

So many Sicilians and Chinese, with their talent for underwriting scams and maiming opponents, prove useful to Rand when Ballinger and the CIA try to kill him. The CIA, you must understand, doesn't really want to play hardball with the Russians; only Rand grasps the real threat: "We opted for prayer and peanut butter while they opted for panzers, so we lose . . . What it's all about is big fish eat little fish and the only thing that counts in this world is power and the will to use it." There, I think, we hear the authentic voice of the author of the Gemstone plan.

FRANCIS FORD COPPOLA PRESENTS

Now! as it is

MAN BEHIND NOW!

The Anglo-French financier Sir James Goldsmith has been in a battle with the British press for years. So the conservative multimillionaire announced plans to start Now!, Great Britain's first weekly news magazine, many assumed Goldsmith had decided to seek a public forum for his outspoken views. "There is a considerable element of truth in saying I've started Now! to gain a political platform," concedes Goldsmith. What has surprised his many critics, however, is not that "Jimmy" Goldsmith has himself a magazine, but that Now! is off to an unexpectedly promising start.

Since its debut last month, the first three issues of Now! have sold out on the London newsstands. And although the inaugural issue missed so many breaking news stories that Fleet Street wags promptly dubbed it "Then!", the magazine is improving editorially.

Recent issues included solid pieces on the problems of British industry and lavish color spreads of Pope John Paul's trip to Ireland. Last week, Now! scored a journalistic coup when it obtained the first in-depth interview with Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher since she took office. But while the 144-page weekly offers a chatty package of tidbits, profiles and features on the arts, as well as news, its flashy graphics sometimes make editorial content hard to distinguish from its numerous ads.

Some see Now! as the latest effort by Sir James to establish himself as a full-fledged press lord. In the last three years, it has been widely reported that he was interested in buying The Observer and the Beaverbrook chain. Two years ago, he purchased the French news weekly L'Express, and if Now! is successful, he plans to start a daily newspaper in Britain.

A VOICE: The 46-year-old Goldsmith is admittedly driven by a desire to develop a voice for private enterprise and to promote his belief in a decentralizing, egalitarian brand of conservatism. "I feel the desperation of seeing the loss of will of our Western world—and with it our loss of position," he says. "It's fair to say that getting into political journals is the act of a frustrated politician."

Since he has taken over L'Express, Goldsmith has halted its circulation decline at 325,000 (down from 722,000 in 1973) and restored profitability. While he rarely intervenes in editorial operations, he has made the magazine less oriented toward government policy by, among other things, firing editor Philippe Grumbach, who was close to President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, and replacing him with scholarly columnist Jean-François Revel.

At Now!, the entire stable of political columnists is planted firmly on the right. After soundly rejecting Jimmy Carter ("bewildered") and Teddy Kennedy (lacking "integrity" and "guts") for U.S. President, editor-in-chief Anthony Shrimley announced that fortunately the Republicans R.P. McCULLOCH'S SON

Philippe Achache—Impact Goldsmith, latest issue: Seeking a platform have provided two good choices—John Connally and Alexander Haig. There is no doubt where the power of Now! rests. "If there were a disagreement with the editor," Goldsmith says, "the editor would leave." Part of the attraction of Now! is Sir James himself; he attracts attention and knows it. Born of a French mother and a British father who owned several French hotels, Jimmy Goldsmith quit Eton at 17. After three years of gambling and rousting about on $18,000 he won at the races, he hit the international headlines when he eloped with Brazilian tin heiress Isabella Patifio. When his bride died later that year of a cerebral hemorrhage, Goldsmith won a custody battle with her parents for his infant daughter. For the past decade, the energetic entrepreneur has lived a free-wheeling life-style, openly maintaining a Goldsmith has proved equal to managing a complicated business. With some initial help from a wealthy relative, he developed a pattern of buying weak companies at low prices and turning them around. In 1964, he formed Cavenham Foods, a French-based food distributorship that featured both candies and diet food, and eventually he pyramided the company into Europe's third largest food empire, with sales of nearly $4 billion.

Goldsmith's success, however, has failed to net him acceptance by the British Establishment. "There is a profound suspicion about his authoritarian political views, his personality and how he made his money," says Donald Treford, editor of The Observer. In his defense, Goldsmith has said, "I don't believe that people should disclose exactly what they do and how. I think people have the right to privacy."

SPOTLIGHT: That is a right Goldsmith seems to cherish more dearly as he is scrutinized more thoroughly. He was incensed when Private Eye, a satirical bi-weekly, implied he had helped obstruct a police inquiry into the whereabouts of Lord Lucan, who disappeared after being accused of murdering his children's nanny. The enraged Goldsmith brought the first criminal-libel suit admitted to the British courts since 1925, bombarding Eye—and its distributors—with more than 80 writs. Eye conceded the implication was false, and Goldsmith settled for $60,000 in lawyer's fees plus a full-page public apology. And he continues to wage a passionate attack on the press's "prurient and morbid" invasion of privacy. Recently, he testified in court that an "inner circle" of journalists is out to get him, and last month wrote a letter to 120 Members of Parliament calling for stricter laws to govern the press.

Most of Fleet Street is watching what kind of magazine will be published by a man who insists on privacy, who spends hundreds of thousands of dollars suing journalists and entertains a conspiracy theory to explain how he has been scrutinized by the press. There is no doubt Jimmy Goldsmith is committed to his new calling. He is paying his 71 journalists the highest wages on Fleet Street—$25,000 to $55,000 a year. And his $15 million investment includes a first-year promotional budget of $5 million to give Now! every chance of survival. (Shrimley says he needs a minimum circulation of 250,000 to succeed.) Insiders now think that Now! will be around at least for the next two years—the amount of time Goldsmith has said he would support it. And some even believe the entertaining, opinionated, conservative news magazine may well find a permanent place on the British newsstands.

JFK in Dallas, King in Memphis: Conspiracy was the conclusion, but the committee's web of evidence and conjecture was gossamer thin.

FRANCIS FORD COPPOLA PRESENTS — THE "LITTLE LAMB" AND THE "LION/LAMB"

TALES OF CONSPIRACY

BY HONORABLE ANIELLO DELLACROCE

With little fanfare and less suspense, the House assassinations committee assembled in an ornate Capitol caucus chamber one morning last week to disgorge its 686-page report on the murders of John F. Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. As previewed months ago, the haunting conclusions of the panel's nearly two-year, $5.4 million investigation were that "lone gunmen" Lee Harvey Oswald and James Earl Ray probably did not act alone—and that Oswald may have been the dupe of organized crime. The findings were pronounced a "can of worms" by a flummoxed FBI official, but conspiracy junkies traded I-told-you-so's. In New York, Bantam Books published 75,000 copies of the committee's report, hopefully titled "The Final Assassinations Report"—but given the committee's disturbingly open-ended investigation, the title seemed wildly optimistic.

SECOND GUNMAN. The full report rambled through 28 volumes of evidence, and only dedicated buffs could follow it all. The Warren Commission's verdict that Oswald killed Kennedy was conspicuously upheld, as was its finding that a single bullet wounded both the president and former Texas Gov. John Connally. The CIA, the Secret Service, and the FBI were rebuffed of cover-up or involvement in the Kennedy assassination, although the committee harshly criticized the FBI's long COINTELPRO campaign to discredit Dr. King. Elaborately laden with might-have-beens, the committee's assertion of conspiracy seemed largely a matter of conjecture—except for the ominous claim, by a group of acoustics experts, that a second gunman had apparently fired on the Kennedy motorcade and missed.

First advanced last summer and substantially buttressed in December, the acoustics report prompted the committee to make a 180-degree turn in its initial conclusions that Oswald acted alone. The authors maintained that a long-lost recording of Dallas police-radio transmissions contains the echoes of four shots in Dealey Plaza—three by Oswald, firing from the Texas School Book Depository, and a fourth by someone firing from the famous "grassy knoll" along Kennedy's motorcade route. Their analysis was not universally accepted: New York Times columnist Tom Wicker, in a foreword to the paperback edition of the report, argued against it—as did several committee members. But North Carolina Democrat Richardson Preyer, who headed the Kennedy investigation, was persuaded: "I think it takes a greater leap of faith not to believe the acoustics evidence than it does to believe it," Preyer said last week.

The committee was unwilling to provide the merest hint of a phantom gunman's identity, and its effort to prove a motive for we're mired in speculation. Even its definition of "conspiracy" was a stringent legalism: "If two or more individuals agreed to take action to kill President Kennedy and at least one of them took action" leading to Kennedy's death, the report says, that constitutes a conspiracy. Confounded by such subtleties, some committee members rebelled. If the report were offered as prosecution evidence, snapped Michigan Republican Harold Sawyer, "I'd file it in the circular file."

'TENUOUS' LINKS. Half hidden in the report's factual chiaroscuro was the theory favored by staff director G. Robert Blakey—that Oswald was manipulated by mobsters bent on halting the Kennedy Administration's war on organized crime. Investigators traced Oswald's travels in Louisiana during the summer of 1963 and discovered "tenuous" links to the underworld. One was through the late David Ferrie, a cashed airline pilot and sometime private eye who was a suspect in former New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's much-maligned assassination probe. Ferrie worked for a lawyer who represented underworld boss Carlos Marcello in a bitter deportation dispute. Kennedy Administration and knew Marcello personally. The committee found six "credible" witnesses who saw Ferrie and Oswald together.

But Ferrie denied knowing Oswald. So did Marcello, who testified before the assassinations committee in executive session. And the committee conceded that the unstable and passionately ideological Oswald would have made an unlikely candidate for mob hit man. But Explosive identified as Hercules brand "bullseye" smokeless powder.

Detonator functioned on the "hot wire" principle utilizing a small gasoline engine glow plug with a clip connector attached to electrically connect the battery source.

1/8 inch diameter hole drilled in the center of one end cap.

Device triggered by utilizing a sub-miniature phone jack approx. 3/32 inch diameter which when wired in the circuit acted as a switch.

Pulling cord removed pin from jack closing contacts completing electrical circuit and causing explosive ignition.

Approximate size of package: 3" x 3" x 6"

The pipe bomb device was packaged inside a thin cardboard lined wooden box utilizing cotton for padding.

Screw end caps

1-1/2" x 4" galvanized pipe

Black plastic electrical tape holding elements together.
